

Brandi Dunning

Hello, my name is Brandi Dunning. I am a Certified Medical Assistant and phlebotomist-lab technician/coordinator assistant for Physician Research Collaboration. I draw and process laboratory samples for patients participating in clinical research as well as assist my peers with other needs in patient care or administrative duties.

I have been a Certified Medical Assistant for about 15 years. I have worked in primary care and pulmonology, gaining a wealth of knowledge and experience in the medical field and different aspects of health care. I started at Physician Research Collaboration in October of 2016, and count my blessings daily to be part of the wonderful team here at Physician Research Collaboration.

Outside of my career in research, I am a mother of two beautiful daughters aged 4 & 5 years old. I enjoy many hobbies such as crafting, sewing, gardening, reading, painting, and most of all watching my girls grow and learn. I have a third "daughter" Harley Quin. Harley is a 135lb Great Dane/English Mastiff mix that's such a joy to play with and watch my daughters love and cherish her.

FUN FACT: After working in clinical research I was inspired to participate in a clinical research study myself.
