

Rosemary Torraco

Hi! I am Rosemary Torraco. I have been a registered nurse for 43 years and have enjoyed all the various roles in my career. Originally from the east coast, I worked in critical care at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, MD, Dartmouth Hitchcock hospital in Hanover, NH, and multiple hospitals in the Boston area. I also managed an oncology clinic in Exeter, NH, and began my research interest in this arena at the University of Minnesota in the Bone Marrow Transplant Center.

I have continued my love of research here at the Physician Research Collaboration for the past 19 years. I love learning and each position taught me many values which have molded who I am today. My favorite part of all of my roles has been caring for each individual patient and knowing that I can make a difference.