

NATALIE FERGUS

Hello, my name is Natalie Fergus. I am a Certified Clinical Medical Assistant and phlebotomist-lab technician/coordinator assistant for Physician Research Collaboration. I have been a Certified Clinical Medical Assistant for 9 years and have worked in primary care, OB, pulmonology, and urgent care settings. I have gaining a wealth of knowledge and experience in the medical field and in different aspects of health care.

I started at Physician Research Collaboration in February 2017, and am happy to be part of the wonderful team here at Physician Research Collaboration. I draw and process laboratory samples for patients participating in clinical research as well as assist my peers with other needs in patient care or administrative duties.

Outside of my career in research, I am a wife and mother of 1 daughter, and 3 fur-babies. In my free time I enjoy running, obstacle racing, spending time with my family and walking my dogs.

FUN FACT: My lab partner, Brandi Dunning and I have been friends since 1998 and have worked together for nearly 5 years. I am so blessed to work with my best friend and amazing co-workers.
